Contexts:

I. Jesus is the King

The crowd treated Jesus' approach as a triumphal entry and shouted slogans thinking that Jesus would restore the power and glory of the Davidic kingdom: "Blessed is the coming kingdom of our father David!" when they chanted. Even though they were right in that Jesus came as a king, their expectation was simply a monarch who would establish a worldly empire. They presumed that Jesus was entering to purge Jerusalem of foreign dominion and that he would set the ancient glories of Israel. The disciples were still hoping for a glorious earthly kingdom and to reign with Messiah on their thrones. It did not happen just the way they expected. As opposed to their expectation, Jesus' mission was peace and salvation. He knew this peace and salvation would only come through his suffering and death. The world gets saved through weakness, not through strength. Only in this way is evil undone from the inside out.

Jesus appeared in the city as he had foretold three times to suffer and die, and he was not there to set up the rival kingdom to Caesar. But Jesus came as a King. He was crowned with thorns, enthroned on a cross, and hailed as the chief of the fools. His triumphal entry was different from the one envisioned by the crowd. Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem will be more powerful than the ancient Davidic monarchy and more far-reaching than the narrow border of Israel and even the ruling of the then-Roman empire.

II. Jesus Comes to us as the Judge and Savior.

In the Old Testament, trees are often used as symbols and are portrayed as sensitive to their moral surroundings. Jesus judged the Fig Tree v. 12-13. The fig tree had no fruits because it was not in season. Jesus curses it. It is the only destructive miracle that Jesus performed. The fig tree represented Israel, God's people. The temple was the central institution of Israel's religious, political, and economic life. The withering of the fig tree to its very root within a day points to God's judgment on this fruitless temple. God desires fruit, but he finds none. Jesus shares the words from Isaiah 56:7 and Jer. 7:11 in Mark 12:17. Jesus taught them, "Is it not written: 'My house will be called a house of prayer for all nations? But you have made it a den of robbers.'"

Israelites took only place in the temple the gentiles could go and pray, and they turned it into a marketplace for themselves and their comfort and convenience. Jesus had been taking this place during his ministry. He announced forgiveness, healed the sick, and restored many people to society. Jesus replaced the money changers' tables, where worshippers had to pay for atonement. Jesus came as our Savior because He instituted the Lord's Table, where he announced that the free offering of his life provides forgiveness of sins. The pouring out of his blood would replace the system of animal sacrifice for atonement in the temple once and for all. Jesus foretold three times that he would suffer and die. He alone knew that salvation would come only through his suffering and death. His death is where humankind is reconciled to God.
